

How to use 'Turn-over Questions'

The turn-over questions consist of 20 Challenge Cards and 20 'About Me' Cards. We recommend you read through the questions so you are familiar with them before beginning the game.

There are many ways to play the game and you may wish to adjust the game to work better with your group. If you have a large group you may want to split them into smaller groups and give each group a pack of questions.

The purpose of the game is to encourage your young people to open up and feel comfortable talking to you, and with each other, this is especially important if the group don't know each other that well.

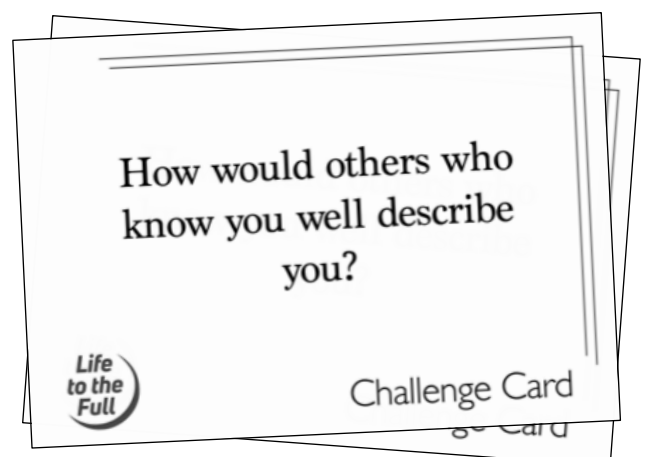

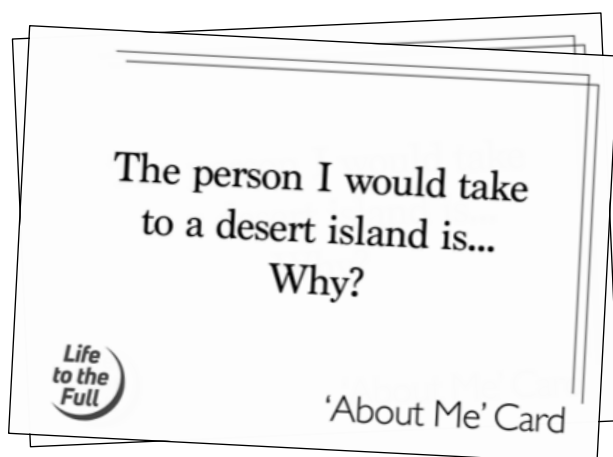

Things to think about:

- The needs of the group (their levels of engagement and group dynamics)
- Some may find it difficult to speak in front of others, or to talk about themselves. The skill of the facilitator is to create a safe environment where your group want to share and respecting where they are on their journey

How to play:

- Sit in a circle with the cards in the middle, faced down in the two piles ('About Me' and Challenge)
- Decide who goes first (the person whose birthday is next, or the person who got up the earliest, etc.), they can pick from either pile and answer the question
- Everyone else answers the question in turn
- The next person takes their turn

You may decide to use a dice. If the player rolls an even number they pick up an 'About Me' card. If it's an odd number they pick a Challenge card.
